

ATHENA Featured on Cyprus Broadcasting Corporation Radio

ATHENA

On 3 February, ATHENA was featured on Proino Dromologio (Morning Itinerary), one of the most widely listened-to morning programmes on the 3rd Channel of the Cyprus Broadcasting Corporation.

Professor Marios Dikaiakos (University of Cyprus) joined host Mr Panikos Chatzipanayis to discuss the recently published ATHENA book.

The interview offered an opportunity to present the aims of the book and to reflect on its scholarly and societal relevance. It also introduced the publication to a broad public audience, extending the reach of the project beyond academic circles.

The conversation highlighted the importance of the volume within current research and public discourse. Appearing on such a well-established programme in Cyprus represents a significant moment for sharing the outcomes of this collaborative work with a wider community of listeners.

The interview is available to listen to online. Please note that the programme is in Greek.
